American Enterprise

In many fields American industrial enterprise operates on an international scale. Left wing elements here and abroad often use this fact as an ideological weapon—according to their version of the story, international business always ruthlessly exploits nations and peoples to feed its own insatiable appetite for money and power, and gives as little as possible in return. However, the truth is that in case after case international enterprise backed by huge sums of American capital and staffed with American executives and technicians has done just the opposite.

The Arabian American Oil Company is a particularly interesting example of this. Saudi Arabia contains one of the world's greatest underground reservoirs of crude oil. It has not been developed. Seventeen years ago the Aramco venture was started with this end in view by a group of American oil companies working in partnership. Agreements and treaties were arranged with the Royal Saudi Arab government. Aramco put up the money and went to work in a far-off land, which has one of the hottest climates on earth, and which had changed but little over the centuries.

At present something like 62 per cent of all the company's employees are Saudi Arab. Americans make up 16.3 per cent of the total, while the balance consists of Palestinian, Adenese, Indian, Pakistani and other nationalities. The company has carried on an extensive accident prevention program. It devoted special effort to industrial training on company time, so that native employees can qualify for better and more responsible jobs as soon as possible. At the government's request, it has developed township layouts of a model character in various areas. It has aided in the development of new local industries, such as ice plants, machine shops, and so on. And it has been a very important factor in helping to improve Saudi Arab agriculture through modern farming methods.

May we suggest a Sitting?

NO doubt about it—you'll make a mighty handsome picture in a strapping new '51 Buick.

But it isn't the way you look, but the way you feel that's really important.

We'd like you to discover a Buick's ease and comfort, a Buick's power and performance, a Buick's steadiness and control—just to see if maybe you have been missing a travel treat.

We'd like you to discover what a valve-in-head engine, as Buick builds it—gingered with Fireball combustion—can mean in pulse-pounding thrill and in big miles-per-gallon figures.

We'd like you to learn what coil springs on all four wheels—not just in front—can do in the matter of smoothing a rough road and keeping you on an ever-level keel.

We'd like you to see what generous roadweight and a rigid torque-tube mean in solid steadiness of ride—what Dynaflo Drive* does for you in downright comfort and convenience—what a breeze it is to handle so big and roomy and impressive a car.

Most of all, we'd like you to note the easy-to-take price tags our cars wear—what a whale of a lot more automobile you get for your money in today's Buicks than you'll get elsewhere.

So—come in for a sitting soon, won't you? Whether you try a SPECIAL, SUPER or ROADMASTER, you'll find it the top buy in its field—and a beauty from any angle.

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on other Series.

Is Stephen J. Roth planning to oppose Senator Blair Moody in the 1952 senatorial primary? In his outburst against Neil Staebler, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, which involved Democratic party fund raisers soliciting campaign contributions from high G. O. P. officials, Roth registered high shock and righteous indignation and spoke out "for the party good."

Roth was by-passed by the appointment of ex-newspaperman Blair Moody to the senatorial seat left vacant by the death of Senator Arthur Vandenberg.

Says one columnist: "Roth was simply sticking a needle into the Williams administration to see how tender it might be and whether there were any others around with needles they wanted to stick."

In any event, the coming senatorial race becomes more keenly contested.

The state legislature will meet August 20 to validate plans for building a new state office building. Governor Williams limited the subject matter to that one item with no present plan to open the session to any other discussion. In special sessions the legislature may consider only subjects opened by the governor.

Price news is fair to good. Newspapers are littered with advertising bargains and clearance sales. Food price predictions are optimistic. But some price cuts take a long time sifting through distribution channels.

Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson has given Detroit a verbal spat for farming out too many defense contracts. He says: "Too much of the military business placed in Detroit is being so distributed by the large industries as to leave Detroit for business as usual. This in turn accounts for some of the present unemployment."

Makes things look tough for a committee named by the governor to channel more government business to the state.

Sen. Blair Moody says however, that a speed-up in war production contracts will cushion unemployment shock for most of the cities in the state.

Cass Hough, Daisy Air Rifle Company executive (Plymouth) says the "mental and physical apathy on the part of all people" came closest to explaining the present economic difficulties of the nation. He was addressing the economic education workshop at Michigan State College.

The Public Relations Division of the State Highway Department costs the state $120,000 each year. Now under a new "policy" all highway stories must be cleared through a $7,400-a-year administrative aide, Elmer Hanna. The new "policy" came to light when Hanna objected to a news story quoting a department staff expert instead of Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler.

Fire damage to Michigan forests has fallen off this year. Thus far 536 fires have burned 3,613 acres as compared with 637 fires, damaging 4,218 during the same period a year ago.

This week 18 conservation officer trainees will be selected. They will take eight weeks of classroom instruction and four to six months of field training.

Archery is a favorite sport of many Michigan residents. In 1950 there were 14,670 resident and 15 non-resident bow and arrow hunters roaming the state.

The combined spring and fall Michigan pig crop is estimated at 106 million head—5 percent above 1950 and 16 percent above the 1940-49 average.

Southern Michigan construction contract awards for the first six months of 1951 were up 6 percent over the same period of last year—all in the face of credit curbs. June total was $133,793,000. Six-months total for 1951 is $442,377,000 as against $416,910,000 for that period in 1950.
